take the liberty of dropping you a line concerning our crop prospects in this, the finest cetton producing section of the world. I know how much interest you feel in whatever tends to inform the mind open the great cotton question, and hence my apology for this liberty. Even the best informed of our cotion statisticians about here are greatly surprised at the continued cotten receipts at this and other domestic ports; and while the most lib-eral estimates have not heretofore, in this quarter, gone higher than 2,750,000 bales, careely any intelligent man now places scarcely any fatelingent main now places the crop estimate at a lower number than 3,250,000 hales. Our receipts at this port now foot up 285,000, and will probably reach, by the close of the season, 300,000 bales, against 247,000 bales last year. I take great pains in carefully soliciting in-formation from each of my customers as they come in (and they occupy all the in Arkansas washed by the waters of the Arkansas, White, Little Red, Black, St. Francis and Mississippi rivers) and I have yet to bear a single instance unfavorable to the growth, prospects and generally

To a casual thinker this would seem to be utterly unpardonable, espe-cially with a people so recently emerged from a condition in which there was so much actual suffering from this very cause; and yet, when you remember that under the changed condition of labor al-most every extron producer (I mean expeially the freedman) is part owner is the roduction of his labor, and that, expect-ng to change his locality every year, as they all now most frequently do, he is anxions to be the possessor of something that will be easily converted into cash, you will easily conclude that he will inion of all other agricultural productions. sistency of planters in growing cetten. Taking into view, then, the present and future prospects of the cotton question, what is to be the effect upon the manufactured article? How are the prices of goods to be affected, and what relations will prices and quantities produced bear so the present quotations of gold, manuactured articles and the raw material? factured arrices and the raw discreta-Will not prices of goods open, the com-ing autumn, with gradually receding quotations? Or will manufacturers so-cautiously graduate their productions to the condition of supply and demand as to misintain something like an even and tolerably stable scale of prices? FINANCE.

The money market presents nothing of interest to-day. Currency is becoming scarcerday by day, and borrowers are beginning to experience much diminuity in negotiating even No. 1 paper. We hoard of 1½ per cent. being paid upour some gilt edged on the street, and it is not at all unfrequent to hear of 2 per cent. being offered. Exchange is in light supply, and rates are firm. Our hands check upon the East at % promium, and buy at part of % prem.

The demand for Stocks and Bonds does not seem to be active, and we have no sales to resport.
